CEO comments

Jacques Näsström says: We have during 2011 taken major and exciting steps in our development towards becoming an important pharmaceutical company. The Board has been strengthened and we have also been able to make complementary additions to our organization. We are now listed on NASDAQ OMX First North, and have after the listing completed a 109 million SEK new share issue, which we expect to cover costs until the results of the important clinical cancer study. This study will start mid 2012 and results are expected by the end of 2013. The first clinical study in acute myocardial infarction is ready to restart and will be completed in mid 2012.

* SEK17 092 k of the costs are related to impairment. The Board decided in December that the capitalized costs for patents and work on own development will be impaired. The decision to discontinue capitalization of costs in this stage of development was in order to make an adjustment to how other companies in the pharmaceutical industry has chosen to activate the cost of patents and for its own development.

Company profile

PledPharma is a Swedish specialty pharma company, which develops new treatments of life threatening diseases. We are focused on developing a medicine that reduces the serious side effects, which develop in connection with chemotherapy treatment, and on developing a medicine that limits the damages on the heart that occurs when acute myocardial infarction is treated with coronary angioplasty. Our projects meets significant medical needs and we have the opportunity to offer patients valuable supportive treatments at serious and common life-threatening diseases. This means that we also have the potential of offering our shareholders strong return on investment.

Considerable market potential within cancer and coronary infarction treatments

The global market for supportive cancer treatment is more than SEK 35 billion and 3.3 million doses of the chemotherapeutic oxaliplatin, which is the foundation in colorectal cancer treatments, are given per year.

1.2 million coronary angioplasties are done each year in connection with acute myocardial infarction treatment.

Ongoing clinical programs

We are currently developing two drug development projects in clinical phase II with the patent protected substance class PLED-derivatives. We are investigating the preventive effect of PLED-derivative (PledOx[®]) on chemotherapy-induced side effects in colorectal cancer treatment in one of the studies.

In the other early and small clinical study, we are examining a PLED-derivative's ability to limit reperfusion injuries in patients with acute myocardial infarction going through coronary angioplasty.

Our Vision

To become the leading specialty pharma company, which develops medicines that protect healthy cells from oxidative stress during treatment of life threatening diseases.

Our business model

We develop medicines in areas where there are huge medical needs. The projects are based upon patented and clinically available PLED-derivatives, and thereby combines huge medical need with strong likelihood of success. We are mid-term focusing on developing our projects to phase IIb, and then to out-license continued development and commercialization against milestone and royalty payments for the rights.

Business goal

Out-licensing of a first clinical project is planned when the study results are available at the end of 2013.
